>> Why this « ICT and older people» day ?

> Older people are the focus of organizers, and also of the coolest actuality : older people (or seniors, old, retired, papy-boomers, ...) are raising big questions to our society. Demography shows them as a challenge, an economical sector, a reflect of ourselves, a historical unknown situation... There are too many facets to mention...

At the same time, technologies have evolved as never in these last few years and now play a major part in our social and professional lives to the point that a non internet user becomes almost an "under-citizen". Paradoxically, technologies have never been so easy to use, but their proliferation changes the ICT world into a jungle, where only skilled technologist can read the trends.

Yet, older people, and a fortiori those most old – in a situation of loosing autonomy – show the double characteristic to be on the front line of "e-excluded" and the very most explosive age group ! Boredom, family and social link, staying in touch with the society, staying alert, assistance, are among the key-words.

In this context, private and public actors, domestic and European have started to move with strong initiatives and ambitious projects. The evolution of technologies focuses the debates on the human side of things (technologies are just ... technologies) and on the economical sustainability of the several possible solutions.

This is a promising sector known only so far to a few experts. We therefore hope this final workshop and the associated conferences will deliver a greater insight into what has been achieved so far along with plans for the future.

The "ICT and older people" day proposes a wide angle screening. It will not solve everything, but will contribute to make energies meet each other, and hopes to generate synergies for the best benefit of ... older people !

>> Last minute !

> We will have the extreme pleasure and honour of the the presence of Mrs Nora Berra, French state secretary in charge of senior citizens (under condition).
