Motivating New Technologies for Adult Education in Rural Areas

2013—2015

MoTech PROJECT

With the rapid advancements in information and communication technology, digital teaching and learning has captured interests of educators more than ever in developing innovative learning and teaching activities that may lead to an increase in the quality of their courses.

Innovative digital tools have started to become an important component of long-term educational strategies and the development and dissemination of innovative methods, contents, and contexts.

The project objective is to create possibilities for adults' personal development in computer literacy and foreign languages using creative education methods, e-learning methods so that participants could adopt knowledge gained in practice within their local communities or at work

PROJECT ACTIVITIES

The ICT experts in e-learning from partner countries developed the content of 9 international workshops carried out during 6 international project meetings:

* Using JotFofm in Research and Adult Education,

* Using Blogs in Teaching and Learning,

* Digital Storytelling and Presentation Tools: A Proposal for Fun, Eye Catching, and Engaging Presentations,

* Wikipedia for Teaching and Learning,

* High-Voltage Text for Presentations,

* Be a Great Presenter. Using Prezi and Glogster Tools in Education,

* Using Google Drive Disc in Education,

* Broadcasting Your Lessons.

In addition, we were able to watch seminars by Dmitrios Vlachopoulos, PhD assistant professor at European University Cyprus online:

* Open and Distance Education: From Theory to Reality,

* Web 2.0 for Teaching and Learning,

* The Digital Profile of Education Professionals: Can We Handle the Digital Natives?

PROJECT DISSEMINATION

Dissemination events at local level permanently promoted local knowledge of creative education in all partner communities and were described in 3 Project Newsletters which can be found on our project webpage:
