OUTDOOR ICT

is a Grundvig Project focusing on “Action Plan on Information and Communications Technologies for Ageing” of the European Commission.

Expressly “Ageing well in the Information Society”?

That project involves 6 partners

Italy (Università LiberEtà del Fvg and Municipality of UDINE)

Spain (Aula de Mayores de la universidad de Malaga)

Austria (Die Kärntner Volkshochschulen)

Portugal (Cultural Institute of Evora)

France (Institut E-seniors)

Turkey (Edirne Turizm ve Otelcilik Meslek Lisesi Okul Aile Birligi)

OUTDOOR ICT is built around the idea of geocaching. Through geocaching the partnership attempts to carry out a program to promote education and awareness of important sights from an environmental or historical/patrimonial point of view in each of the participating countries. The learners involved would get to know not only important sights in their own country, but also in other countries belonging to this partnership by sharing teaching materials and experiences.

The main objective of the project is to provide opportunities for exploring ways of applying knowledge gained in the field of ICT to the promotion of an active lifestyle by gaining and sharing knowledge and experiences of partners and participants and empowering people over45.

The main questions the project is seeking answers to are:

- What are the barriers of people 45+ to using ICT tools and applications extensively?
- Can informal and entertaining ways of teaching ICT be a high motivational force for older people?
- Can online social networking systems support social integration of the target group?
- Can intergenerational gaps be diminished by applying new approaches?

The project will highly on the expertise of the participating organizations.
